OUR BRIEFING

Our client had experienced a traumatic incident that took place in the kitchen and hallway of the building. Once the emergency services had completed their work the scene was left containing high risk bodily fluids and other contaminants. Ideal Response were chosen because of their trauma cleaning experience and reputation for efficiency and professionalism in challenging circumstances.

OBJECTIVES

Bodily fluids, grossly unsanitary objects and pest infestation were evident throughout the hallway and kitchen area. High risk of contamination at the scene dictated the need for specialist trauma cleaning services using Personal Protective Equipment. After thorough trauma cleaning and decontamination, all contaminated waste, including flooring, was to be removed and disposed of appropriately.

THE TECHNICAL PART

The trauma clean-up process had several challenging elements that required expertise, specialist equipment and techniques. Blood and fluids had become embedded within flooring and materials. Vinyl flooring needed to be removed to access the area beneath to carry out thorough cleaning and decontamination. A complete clean and sanitisation of the area was carried out and contaminated waste was removed and disposed of appropriately. An infestation of insects was dealt with using “fog” and “fly bomb” techniques to prevent further contamination.
